INTERIM MANAGEMENT SERVICE LAUNCHED WITH BACKUP FROM GLOBAL PROCUREMENT CONSULTANCY

A new service to provide senior interim managers specialising in procurement has been launched with backing from the global consultancy ADR International.

ADR Interim will offer industry highly trained and experienced senior procurement managers on a temporary basis to fulfill short-term demands for specialists.

This could include, for example, setting up a new procurement department, helping cope with unexpected demand or filling a senior position while a permanent executive is recruited.

ADR International is one of the world's leading procurement consultancies, focused on strategic sourcing, transformation, people development and supplier management. It has 21 years of experience working with many of the world's leading companies in 50 countries.

ADR International has been providing high-quality interim procurement managers for many years from its bank of consultants, but has now established a dedicated organisation to focus on this fast-growing sector.

ADR Interim is based in St. James's Square, London and supported from ADR International's offices in Oxfordshire, and internationally in North America, South Africa and Australia.

Richard McIntosh, Director of ADR Interim, said: "The skills of senior procurement managers are very much in demand and we are ideally placed to help fulfill the needs of companies looking for high quality managers.

"We know procurement, we know the market and we know the people. We aim to provide the very best interim managers to help organisations maintain their excellent procurement departments at times of need, or to help transform them into world-class operations."

Robin Jackson, CEO of ADR International, said: "We have been aware for some time of the growing need for top-class interim managers in procurement roles and we are responding to that demand.

"ADR Interim is set to take its place among the best management recruitment agencies in the UK and in the world. ADR International has the experience and client list to back our interim organisation so that it can offer a great service to companies and provide interim managers with excellent opportunities at some of the world's best-known corporations."
